

BRIDE FOR A DAY SUES.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 12.—Charlotte B. Shields to-day began suit in the Supreme Court to have her marriage to Daniel Shields annulled. The couple were married at Croton-on-Hudson Dec. 8 by the Rev. G. W. MacFarlane. The bride then lacked five days from being of age and did not have the consent of her parents.

She charges that though her husband told her he would furnish a home for her and had plenty of money on which to support her, he never contributed anything to her support. She also says she has not seen her husband since the day after they were married and does not know where he is.

HERCULEAN PRISONER FLOORS POLICEMEN, SMASHES FURNITURE

Giant Pole, Arrested for Assault, Gives His Captors Lively Hour.

The police of the Bedford avenue station, Williamsburg, had a lively hour early to-day with a gigantic Pole, who wrecked a station house before he could be locked up.

The trouble started shortly after 1 o'clock this morning, when James Brady, a watchman employed by the Eastern District Terminal Company at North Ninth street, dodged behind a freight car barely in time to escape several bullets fired from an ambush.

Brady got out his own revolver and emptied it at a man who was running along a line of freight cars. Brady started in pursuit and overtook the man at Kent avenue and North Tenth street.

A life and death struggle followed, in which the watchman was also beaten when James McGrath, also a watchman, and Policeman Kenner of the Bedford avenue station came to his aid. Only by the free use of his nightstick was Kenner able to get his prisoner to the station.

There the prisoner said he was Marion Zaminaki, forty-two years old, of No. 801 Kent avenue. He had been working as a sugar mixer in the American Sugar Refining Company, but had been discharged early this morning, he said. He was in an ugly temper when the policeman attempted to put him in a cell after he had been charged with felonious assault.

Detective John Dowling, who attempted to lead him to his cell, was felled with a powerful blow on the jaw. Other policemen were knocked down in the struggle that followed. Before he was finally pinned to the

BABYLON RESIDENCE BURNED

(Special to The Evening World.)

BABYLON, L. I., May 12.—The residence of the late Cornelius Kingsland, one of the show places of Babylon, was destroyed by fire early to-day. The house had recently been purchased by Stephen Van Allen and D. K. Morrell Jr., and was being moved to a site on the opposite side of Cedar Lane.

The fire started from the inside and is believed by Mr. Morrell to have been of incendiary origin. Van Allen, who was at the fire, offered $1,000 reward for the arrest of the persons who set the blaze. There was a thunder shower last night and it has been suggested that the house might have been struck by lightning, though the shower was at midnight and the fire occurred at 4 this morning. The loss is about $18,000.

BOY ADVENTURER FINDS WANDERLUST EXHAUSTED

Sixteen-Year-Old Orphan Chooses New York for Home After Look at the World.

Vincent Murray, wanderer, reached New York to-day and decided to settle down here and become an American citizen. He is sixteen years old and has been in every large port in the world, though this is the first time he ever saw New York.

Vincent came in to-day on the Red Cross liner Stephano from Halifax, wearing the uniform of a trumpeter in the Royal Artillery and carrying papers showing that he has been an apprentice aboard many steamships in the past three years.

Born in Baffanau, County Mayo, Ireland, Vincent was left an orphan when he was eleven years old. He joined the training ship Ganges and, after a couple of years of training, went out as a ship's boy. In this capacity he sailed the seven seas, winding up in Halifax three months ago on board one of the ships of the Allan line.

At Halifax he became the bugler of a regiment of the Royal Artillery in barracks and got along quite well until he liked the bandmaster in a flat fight. Following that he concluded to travel again and this time he came to New York.

Vincent was down on the ship's manifest as fourteen years old and on

The Power of Cooperation

WITH muscles and sinews applied in union three powerful horses draw a great steel girder. One horse alone could not move it. Two horses could draw it with difficulty, and only for a short distance. But three horses, working in complete harmony and in perfect cooperation, supply ample power for the task.

The people of New York want thousands of pianos—not one or two, or twenty, but thousands. For these thousands to scatter their trade among a hundred dealers makes each purchase costly, wasteful and very often an inconvenience.

But for all of these thousand piano purchasers to focus upon this one great store—with its great purchasing power working in cooperation with them and with the manufacturers—the buying advantages at once become apparent.

Otherwise you could not purchase your choice of a Fischer, a Charles Kohler, an Autopiano, a Pianista or a Stratford player-piano at the prices which we have put upon them. Otherwise you could not pay for it on the low terms which we are glad to make.

Otherwise you could scarcely get the guarantee which we give you. Otherwise you would not be offered the thirty-day money back privilege or the one-year exchange privilege. Otherwise we could not say that "in the event of death all further payments will be cancelled."

Unite your desire for a piano or player-piano with the thousands, and come to the store which can give these advantages through this tremendous force of co-operation.
